

Strange Town

It was midnight, darkness filled the sky... The moon shimmered across the town. I stared out my window in astonishment as several buildings moved.

I was in bed; wide awake when something odd happened. I felt my body shiver and knew something ominous was near.

I crept outside; tip toeing. My body tingled with excitement. Suddenly I stood in aghast at the sight of a movement. Prowling underneath the mossy bushes lay thousands of odd creatures staring at me.

The creatures eyes glazed in horror and anger. Silence covered the town as the creatures stared at me. One movement broke the silence, a large creature bouldered his way through the creatures. I froze in shock as it advanced towards me. It made the first sound that I could actually understand! I was a threat to them; a monster. I asked them if I could stay even if I'm a threat. An ambiguous reply of protest rose through the crowd of creatures.

Eventually I could see what was going on with the creatures. They muttered like they were planning something suspicious. The large creature grumbled with uncertainty as it said I could stay. In an exuberant tone, I quietly shouted a celebration that I could still visit this odd town!

It was very astonishing as I explored around the odd town. Everybody was still uncertain but still greeted me. The moon's light started to dim and fade away. Sunshine started to form and the town began to get into place, the oddness of the town began to fade. One day I'll visit this place again.
